

WEJO MICROSOFT PARTNERSHIP VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

SARAH LARNER [00:00:04] Wejo entered into a strategic partnership with Microsoft to bring the power of connected vehicle data and enrich Wejo mobility intelligence portfolio. Under the new agreement, Wejo will build its suite of data and intelligence solutions on the Microsoft Azure cloud platform.

LOREN HILLBERG [00:00:24] By combining forces, the two organisations will unlock the power of connected vehicle data, providing customers with greater value at scale and across multiple industries, while demonstrating a shared respect for total commitment to data privacy and security.

CHRIS HASSEBIEN [00:00:38] In addition to the partnership, the company's long term vision for the relationship includes the potential for Wejo integration into Microsoft's data platform, including operational data, source analytics, AI, machine learning, data sharing, data governance and business intelligence.

KATE ROSENSHINE [00:00:58] Microsoft Azure Cloud Platform builds, runs and manages data and applications at scale in a secure and trusted environment.

SARAH LARNER [00:01:07] Wejo is leveraging connected vehicle data across multiple industries to ignite a mobility revolution with windows extensive and growing data assets on Azure. Together, we have the opportunity to help customers make better business decisions, provide differentiated customer experiences and find new revenue streams to drive future innovation.

CATALIN CAPOTA [00:01:32] One of the challenges that the automotive industry faces is the sheer scale of data from cars such as real time traffic alerting, parking availability, detection, road conditions and autonomous vehicle communications

DAVID BURNS [00:01:43] Wejo Microsoft are building cloud infrastructure that can be placed in the right locations to enable edge processing. Wejo Adept and Microsoft Azure will benefit carmakers, and their drivers in many ways, including near real time data exchange, data security and privacy and scalability.

KATE ROSENSHINE [00:02:06] Wejo's Mantra for its products is data for good, with data security and privacy at its heart. From the get go, Microsoft Azure only strengthens that commitment. Drivers must be in control of their data, and together, Wejo and Microsoft will ensure that protection.

MATT BATEMAN [00:02:21] We also jointly recognise that how we think about big data today will quickly be surpassed by the vast amount of connected vehicle data infrastructure and camera data to name just some sources being generated every day.

LOREN HILLBERG [00:02:35] Scalability and edge processing will deliver near real time driver experiences as the data grows by Azure's patented artificial intelligence functionality will enhance predictability. For example, helping to reduce road traffic accidents through near real time data modelling.

MATT BATEMAN [00:02:49] Wejo's early market has been data monetisation, and this will continue to grow fast as a revenue stream, per our business plan.

DAVID BURNS [00:02:57] Wejo's OEM partners are increasingly interested in Wejo as a cloud platform, which is now built on Azure. This will enable them to unlock incredible insights into the data from their own vehicles. That's just one use case.

MATT BATEMAN [00:03:13] The massive growth in data will require edge processing, where together we can deploy Azure and Wejo adapt as a service as vehicle to vehicle communication increases. This type of card solution will become essential.

DAVID BURNS [00:03:27] Together, Microsoft and Azure can accelerate the delivery of solutions such as crash notification, power failure prediction, traffic signal automation and pay by car features. I could go on, but the possibilities are almost endless.

MATT BATEMAN [00:03:45] We loaded our data into Azure and quickly saw huge benefits for Microsoft's mapping solutions. Wejo's data is only from connected vehicles live on platform covering 95 percent of roads in the US.

KATE ROSENSHINE [00:03:59] Wejo's data today extends across the US and Europe. We're starting with a daily delivery of the whole of Wejo data, and over the coming weeks and months, we'll be progressing this to being a live data feed in near real time.

LOREN HILLBERG [00:04:11] This will enable us to deliver significant benefits to our customers with real time traffic alerts, notification of dangerous road conditions and the best way to get from A to B live based on what's happening on the roads. This is very exciting for our solution.
